Why is there such a stunningly short supply of designers in Silicon Valley right now?

Edit

I've got a list of half a dozen great companies who are having troubles finding a good designer right now and every designer I've talked to is deluged by work. What confluence of circumstances are making it such a buyers market for designers right now?

The major causes mentioned are the following:

1. Design talent is valued more now than it was 5-10 years ago, especially the interaction and user experience design specializations.

2. Engineering has increased in agility, creating an upturn in the quantity of products requiring design talent.

3. Design is hard, and the expectations of designers now are much higher than they were in years past.

4. Design education is lacking in its ability to put out designers of quality that can meet the demands of our current industry.

5. Downturns in the 2000s left a shortage of mid-career designers.

I've noticed the same thing. It's wild right now. I was discussing this with Braden Kowitz and he made an interesting point. Thanks to a lot of progress in the world of development (which is not my area of expertise but frameworks like Rails and Django spring to mind), it takes a much smaller number of engineers to build a great product. Consequently, startups are smaller and getting to minimum viable product faster.

On another track, there's a much larger appreciation for the role designers play, and

Overview

Freddie Von Chimpen is the mascot of MailChimp, and the brand personality. Freddie communicates the point of view and his always on the go nature. We know this brand mascot.

Freddie always has a kind smile and makes them feel comfortable. He lets people know that MailChimp is a fun experience. Freddie like to be in the situation is serious, the fun.

MailChimp often surprises people with a link to a goofy YouTube video but never in the way of being

Brand Traits

FUN but not childish

FUNNY but not goofy

POWERFUL but not complicated

HIP but not alienating

EASY but not simplistic

TRUSTWORTHY but not stodgy

INFORMAL but not sloppy

Visual Lexicon

COLOR

The right colors in the MailChimp palette convey a sense of humor, but are slightly desaturated to make them refined, and not too proper room. MailChimp is fun, so powerful and refined. Neutral colors soften the overall sides of the MailChimp personality.

TYPOGRAPHY

Easy-going, efficient, and easy to use, and its effects it. Simple, sans-serif headings and body text varied in scale, weight and color to form hierarchy make MailChimp feel comfortable cardigan that is both functional

STYLE NOTES

Flat and simple, keeping things easy and intimidating. Soft, subtle textures warm up the space and make it feel Surprisingly, and only to interject a bit of humor, never give application feedback, ask.

Voice

The voice of MailChimp is familiar, friendly, and above all human. The voice of the brand is the voice of the brand.

Behind the voice of the brand is the voice of the brand. The voice of the brand is the voice of the brand.

Voice (continued)

Instead of "do this" or "do that" we use "let's" to get the message across. It's not "let's" to get the message across. It's not "let's" to get the message across.

The Art of the Critique

CRITIQUE

≠

ART DIRECTION

RULES OF THE CRIT.

- 1. Visual designer is the owner & gets veto power*
- 2. Write down agreed-upon goals and keywords on the whiteboard*
- 3. Focus feedback on problems, not solutions*
- 4. Don't try to get to a final solution as a group*

DON'T SAY THIS:

---

“You should take out this thing.”

“I don’t like Purple. It’s depressing”

“Move that higher up on the page”

“Make the font bigger?”

INSTEAD, SAY THIS:

---

“I don’t know what to focus on first”

“This thing is distracting.”

“What’s the color strategy?”

“This piece of content is more important than the others.”

“I’m having a hard time reading the text.”
